FILM FESTIVAL

2010

18th Annual Dublin
Lesbian and Gay Film Festival
Light House Cinema

29 JUL
02 AUG

CHAIRPERSON'S WELCOME 2010

This year the Dublin Lesbian and Gay Film Festival, or Gaze as it's come to be known far and wide, comes full circle. Yvonne O'Reilly, who co-programmed with Kevin Sexton the very first Festival in 1992, returns to the programmer's seat to deliver what I believe is a fantastic line-up of films that tick almost every box on the queer film lover's diverse list.

Although Gaze has evolved greatly over the past 18 years, one thing that has remained the same is the level of commitment brought to it by volunteers, whether they be on the many incarnations of the Board of Management, or giving of their time, to make the festival be the very best it can be, year in, year out.

I have been involved with the festival in various different voluntary ways since 1999 and what keeps me passionate about Gaze is not only my love of cinema and understanding of the deep need to see ourselves and our lives reflected through film, but the level of community spirit that surrounds the festival. Over the years, in the IFI and now The Light House, the weekend of the festival itself has become a very special social space where we get to share time with each other in a rare and important way. Watching movies together side by side, discussing them in between screenings, catching up with each other or meeting new people: the Gaze experience is a wonderfully connected one.

We are a diverse community made up of people on all ends of the spectrum of being and experience. Spread out across the country, sometimes living in isolated places, we hold on to the idea and sense of community because it keeps us tied to a world of unquestioning acceptance of our sexuality and gender.

Gaze is an event and a celebration that brings our community together. That it does so and has continued to do so for 18 years is testament to the people behind the scenes, making the complicated and hard work of mounting a festival seem easy. I would like to take this space to thank all of those people – the Board of Gaze 2010 who have been working for the past year to bring us towards today, and all of the board members who have gone before us, keeping this show on the road. Thank you to the programmers, from Yvonne and Kevin all those years ago to today, and to the hundreds of volunteers who have generously given of their time and energy since 1992.

I would also like to give a special mention to our Festival Manager, Emily Scanlan, and her sterling intern assistants, Gillian Middleton and Cormac O'Dwyer, who have been a pleasure to work with and a powerhouse of activity, gluing all the pieces of Gaze together so you can sit in The Light House this August, enjoying one of our best programmes yet. And I hope you do enjoy every minute of it.

Chair of Gaze

PROGRAMME DIRECTOR'S WELCOME

Gaze has come of age – the festival is 18, emerging from its teenage years with a level of sophistication and confidence that is evident in the range of excellent film on offer this year. As the founder of the festival, I'm proud to see how it's grown over its 18 years and am delighted to return to programming the festival once more this year.

The festival offers a tantalising choice of features, documentaries and shorts from countries as diverse as Uruguay, Brazil, Argentina, Spain, Switzerland, China, Sweden, Ireland, Norway, New Zealand, UK and USA. It is both gratifying and inspiring to see such quality, diversity and invention in lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender (LGBT) film.

Our opening night offering, I Killed My Mother is a stunning, semi-autobiographical debut film from Canadian writer/director/producer/performer Xavier Dolan. This movie is a golden combination of critically acclaimed and highly entertaining. It is fitting that in our 18th year our programme visits some seminal moments in gay history. Stonewall Uprising is a moving and definitive portrayal of what was to become a turning point in the history of the gay rights movement.

One of the recurring themes in this year's festival is the fluidity of gender. We are all a composite of what the Native Americans call the Two Spirits of male and female. This is a theme also visited in films like Strella, To Die Like A Man, Paulista and The Last Summer of La Boyita, along with documentaries Assume Nothing and Regretters.

I am delighted to include so many top-notch films in this year's festival but particular mention must go to the BBC's magnificent costume drama, The Secret Diaries of Miss Anne Lister, and Jordan Scott's Cracks. The latter was shot here in Ireland and employs the kind of production values we've come to expect from the Scott filmmaking dynasty.

It's an especially strong year for documentaries – including the Toronto Film Festival award-winning film, The Topp Twins; Untouchable Girls; Regretters, Two Spirits, and All Boys share its themes of life's humour and pathos. Prima Donna: The Story of Rufus Wainwright's Debut Opera is not only a fantastic record of an artistic process it also gives us some touching insights into the gifted Wainwright family. The documentary includes interviews with his sister Martha, his father Loudon Wainwright III and his mother Kate McGarrigle.

Soundless Windchime, Leo's Room and I Killed My Mother are all gorgeous, not-to-be missed debut films while The Man Who Loved Yngve, Loose Cannons, and our closing night film Ander are inspired and heart-warming takes on that old favourite – the coming out story. We are delighted also to showcase the 2009 shortlist for Best International Gay Short Film and, as befits our coming-of-age, we are delighted to present a retrospective of Irish Gay Shorts from the 18 years of the festival, in collaboration with Culture Ireland.

I'm proud to say that this film festival has some of the most entertaining, moving, sexy, quirky and outright best films you'll see anywhere this year. I hope gay cinema continues to flourish and I hope you enjoy the profusion of great LGBT films GAZE 2010 offers.

I KILLED MY MOTHER (J'AI TUÉ MA MÈRE)

29 JUL
8.30pm
Light House 1
100 mins

Troubled teenager, Hubert once adored his mother but now he haughtily regards her with contempt, only seeing her tacky sweaters and kitsch taste in decor. Confused by his love/hate relationship with her, it obsesses him more and more each day as he compares his boyfriend's mother, who fully accepts her son's sexuality, with his own, who doesn't know he's gay. The turbulent relationship between mother and son unfolds with a compelling combination of savage fury and melting affection until a final blow-out changes everything. The stunning, semi-autobiographical directorial debut of 20-year-old actor Xavier Dolan is an absolute must-see.

THE SECRET DIARIES OFF MISS ANNE LISTER

30 JUL
6.30pm
Light House 1
90 mins

In 19th Century Yorkshire, orphaned Anne Lister (Maxine Peake) lives with an aunt and uncle, who are anxious for her to marry well and blissfully unaware that she is a lesbian. When her lover enters a marriage of convenience to rich old man, a broken-hearted Anne sets out to find true love. This BBC-produced film has all hallmarks of a British period piece with great settings and fabulous costumes, but it never shirks on the Sapphic passion. Maxine Peake does a fantastic job as the driven, persistent and magnetic Lister, a woman absolutely unwilling to be anyone but herself, living her life how she sees fit and loving who she wants to love. In a word, brilliant.

SOUNDLESS WIND CHIME

30 JUL
6.30pm
Light House 2
110 mins

A stunningly beautiful film, Soundless Wind Chime is about trying to let go after the death of a loved one. Ricky, a timid lad from Beijing, who works as a delivery boy, falls in love with Swiss-born drifter, Pascal. When tragedy strikes, Ricky is lonelier than ever and goes off in search of a connection to his lover. The non-linear narrative takes us from Hong Kong to Switzerland to Beijing, never quite being sure if we are in the past or the present. These jumps in time and location could be confusing, but combined with unexpected musical interludes, mysterious coincidences and the overall beauty of the film, they perfectly evoke the strangeness of grief.

Aspiring writer Tommaso has a comfortable life in Rome with his boyfriend Marco – a life he has kept secret from his family. When he's called back to his small hometown to help run the family pasta business, he decides to come out to his conservative family, hopefully getting out of his business obligations in the process. Things don't exactly go according to plan. Director Ferzan Ozpetek's visual feast is an utterly charming and funny family drama, revealing that Tommaso isn't the only one struggling to navigate between la bella figura (a good public image) and his true desires.

THE TOPP TWINNS: UNTOUCHABLE GIRLS

30 JUL

Truth is stranger and far more wonderful than fiction as lesbian Kiwi twins, Jools and Lynda Topp prove in this award-winning and superbly moving documentary. Mixing yodelling, country singing and comedy with hardcore political activism, The Topps are regarded as national treasures in New Zealand. Using an engaging mixture of live performance, early footage of them as young performers and campaigners, and interviews with their comic creations, this is a warm, intelligent and truly inspiring look at two women who have engaged the hearts and minds of their country just by being their radical, fun-loving selves.

ALL BOYS

2.30pm

72 mins

A documentary about the gay porn industry in Eastern Europe, this film begins as an exercise for its director getting closer to the beautiful young men on the sets of sex films shot mostly in Prague. Instead, Heikkinen's journey reveals some of the human costs of the industry as he meets producers, stars and some of their parents, all telling a story very different to the high gloss, toned and tanned fun and frolics on display in the films. This riveting documentary doesn't shy away from the painful truth behind a seemingly sex-positive facade.

SURPRISE FILM

1 JUL
7.30pm
Light House 1

Do you like a good mystery? This year we present a surprise film – a movie that has absolutely no advance warning of title, director, stars or genre – just a time and a place, and a guaranteed queer quality stamp. Only the Festival Director knows for certain what it is, and neither truth-drugs nor hypnotic flashing lights have persuaded her to divulge any information, except to say she's dying to see it once more. Even the projectionists are the dark (a novelty for them, we're sure).

Taking the stunning photography of Rebecca Swain as its starting point, Assume Nothing sets out to capture the beauty and inner strength of trans individuals and brings out the best in its participants by treating them with care and empathy. The result is a joyous celebration of trans lives supplemented by a collage of Super 8 film, quirky animations, family photos, body parts and gender theory.

Within the confines of a strict, 1930s all-girls English boarding school, a clique of students have a crack (crush) on their enigmatic and charismatic swimming instructor, Miss G (Eva Green). While Miss G originally encourages their idolisation, her attention becomes focused on the arrival of an exotic and beautiful Spanish pupil, Fiamma. As the new girl rebuffs her classmates, the schoolmates begin to grow jealous of Miss G's fascination with Fiamma, and things start to go out of control. Shot in Wicklow and Co. REGRETTERS (ÅNGRARNNA)

1 AUG
6.30pm

60 mins

Two men in their 60s meet and discuss their experiences of having transitioned from male to female and later back to male again. Bravely honest and candid, Orlando and Mikael show personal photographs and archive footage, and converse, asking much more probing questions of each other than an interviewer might. It would be much too simplistic to say that the two participants feel their gender reassignment was a mistake. Rather their lives have taken different paths than they originally anticipated and the real problem is society's rigid gender boundaries.

Under pressure from her no-good junkie boyfriend to undergo full sex change surgery, struggling to maintain a relationship with her estranged son, and fighting against the younger performers at the club where she works, Tonia is disillusioned with life. Jorgelina, a young girl spending the summer in the Argentinian countryside with her father, quickly becomes friends with Mario, a boy her age who harbours a secret even he doesn't understand. As it comes to light, their summer takes a drastic turn. This delicate and uplifting coming-of-age drama, co-produced by Pedro Almodóvar's company El Deseo, perfectly captures the breezy freedom of a pre-adolescent world. The young leads deliver captivating performances, especially non-actor, Nicolás Triese who brings a phenomenal sensitivity to his portrayal of an intersex boy. This is a truly fantastic look at the precociousness of childhood and loss of innocence.

On June 28, 1969 when the Stonewall riots erupted, tremors were felt around the world giving birth to the Gay Rights Movement. This enormously moving and inspiring new documentary uses a wealth of archive photographs and film to tell the story through the memories of key eyewitnesses - a drag queen, a street kid, a Village Voice journalist, and the policeman who led the arresting party. The filmmakers take great care to build up a complex picture of the state of gay politics before Stonewall and the terrible legal and medical constraints that generations suffered under.

Forty-something farmer, Ander, leads an isolated existence in a world where men are expected to behave in a particular way and women are expected to know their place. But when he suffers an accident that necessitates new plans be put in place to run the farm, José enters his life and things will never be the same. Roberto Castón's debut feature is a heartbreakingly human portrayal of contemporary rural gay life. Eloquent in its simplicity, its unadorned yet forceful storytelling style and uplifting message makes it a standout of the festival and an ideal closer.
